RE: Pre-Drill Baseline Water Sampling Summary within 1500' Radius
Wassmann A 2H, A 4H
API#: 34-013-2-1355-00-00, 34-013-2-1356-00-00
Pultney Township, Belmont County, Ohio

Dear Mr. Trippel:

Resource Management Services, Inc. (RMS) is pleased to submit this summary of the pre-drill baseline water sampling performed prior to drilling of permitted Wassmann A 2H & A 4H wells on the Wassmann well pad on behalf of XTO Energy Inc. (XTO). The sampling activities included identification of developed private water supplies within a 1500' radius of the site, contacting property owners and collecting water samples at those locations authorized by the property owners.

Several property owners within the 1500' radius indicated private water supplies on their property based on the survey request information sent to them by RMS. Further investigation in the field and with the property owners led RMS to determine whether or not indicated private water supplies constituted viable sampling sources within the 1500' buffer range of the proposed well. Extant sources were physically located by RMS, and one water well was determined to be suitable for sampling.

Attachment 1 is a visual representation of our mapped sample locations and property parcels associated with each owner within 1500'. Attachment 2 includes a spreadsheet synopsis of property owners, GIS data, and surveyed water sources within 1500'. Attachment 3 contains all information recorded in the field about each potential water sampling source. The analytical results data for each sample are included, along with a synopsis spreadsheet, in Attachment 4. Initial homeowner mailings informing homeowners of the intent to sample water, as well as homeowner-completed questionnaires are included in Attachment 5.

Please note: All samples and documentation gathered and represented as a part of this report are associated with proposed, permitted wells Wassmann A 2H & Wassmann A 4H

If you have any questions or require any additional information regarding the above, please don't hesitate to contact us at (724) 465-6556 or via email at bonazza.r@gmail.com.

Dear Jerry L Riggs,

On July 30, 2018, Resource Management Services, Inc. (RMS) collected a water sample from your water source, on behalf of XTO Energy Inc. (XTO), as part of the Pre-Drill Baseline Water Quality Analysis for the Wassman A2H and Wassman A4H Unit Well Pad.

The samples were collected in accordance with Ohio Department of Natural Resources (ODNR) guidelines and analyzed by a state certified laboratory, Geochemical Testing. Enclosed, please find the laboratory report for the collected samples.

The enclosed table summarizes the laboratory analytical results of the collected sample, and compares the results to the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency (OEPA) health-based standards for private water systems.

The Ohio Department of Natural Resources (ODNR) Division of Oil and Gas Resources Management website (http://www.ohiodnr.com/oil/watersampling_bmp/tabid/23361/Default.aspx) provides further information regarding your analytical results, which is also attached for your reference.

Should you have any additional questions regarding the enclosed information or require additional information, do not hesitate to contact Mr. Kevin Brucha of XTO Energy Inc at (724) 772-8732.

Respectfully,

Rick Bonazza

Recommendations for Drinking Water Well Sampling Before Oil and Gas Drilling

November 2012

Introduction

This fact sheet provides a basic overview for private and/or public drinking water well owners who are considering collecting samples prior to oil and gas drilling (including in the Marcellus and Utica shale deposits) near their properties. If you are collecting drinking water data to document water quality, you should follow a few important steps as outlined in this fact sheet. These include obtaining information on your well, such as when and how it was constructed; conducting research on sampling costs and certified laboratories in your area; and ensuring labs follow proper procedures and sample collection methods.

Who regulates oil and gas well drilling in Ohio?

The Ohio Department of Natural Resources' Division of Oil and Gas Resources Management is responsible for regulating the permitting, drilling and production of Ohio's oil and natural gas resources. During well construction, all critical aspects are monitored closely by inspection staff to provide further ground water protection. A properly constructed well; the use and testing of well control devices; and isolating oilfield waste fluids by proper containment all minimize the potential for adverse impacts. To learn more, please visit ohiodnr.com and click on the Shale Development link in the upper left hand corner.

Will oil and gas well drilling affect my water well quality or quantity?

Modern oil and gas well drilling is a highly technical and closely monitored process with regulations in place to protect underground sources of drinking water during and after the drilling process. The chance of ground water contamination or loss of water due to oil and gas well drilling is very small. If ground water quality impacts from drilling activities occur, they most often are within a few hundred feet of the drill site.

What information should I obtain prior to collecting a water sample from my well?

Ohio laws require that a water well record known as a well log be filed for all new wells drilled since 1945; some earlier well logs are also available. Well log records are online at www.ohiodnr.com/water/maptechs/wellogs/appNEW/ or call ODNR at (614) 265-6740 for assistance.

Well logs show how deep a water well is drilled and how it is constructed. Knowing the depth of your well and the type of geologic materials (for instance, sandstone, shale, limestone, sand and gravel) that are producing the ground water is important information in the event of water quality impacts.

Recommendations for Water Well Sampling Before Oil and Gas Drilling

What else do I need to know before sampling?

Conduct research on the laboratories in your area and the services they offer. Be an informed consumer and get the most for your money. Water samples must be collected and analyzed using proper sampling and laboratory protocols and methods and careful documentation of sample chain of custody. Some labs will come and collect the sample for you; others will only provide the sample containers. Some local health districts or soil and water conservation offices offer sample collection and coordinate with labs for sample analysis. For best results, use a qualified professional to ensure proper collection of your water sample. Improper sampling can result in unreliable data and waste your money.

Are there special water sampling and analysis procedures?

Water sampling should be done only by a professional who is familiar with all sampling and laboratory protocols. Samples should be submitted to an Ohio Environmental Protection Agency (Ohio EPA) drinking water- certified laboratory or a laboratory with similar certification for the analysis of water (e.g. National Environmental Laboratory Accreditation Program). The laboratory should be certified for each chemical parameter to be tested. Without attention to these details, water analyses will be of little or no value in an oil and gas water contamination investigation or a legal proceeding.

A list of Ohio EPA-certified laboratories for drinking water analysis is available online at www.epa.ohio.gov/portals/28/documents/labcert/chemlabs.pdf.

What procedures should occur during water sampling?

The water sample should be collected before any treatment devices (bypassing these devices) such as water softeners or disinfection units as they can affect water quality. This sample location will likely be a spigot or drain at or near the pressure tank before any treatment units. The water sample collected should be representative of water in the well; therefore, it is important to run the water for at least 5-10 minutes to flush out all the water in the plumbing. This will ensure a sample of fresh ground water is obtained. The water sampling professional will document the sample location, date and time, and will collect the water in containers designed for the specific parameters to be analyzed. Preservatives may also be added to the sample container to stabilize the sample on site before transport to the lab. Parameters such as pH and conductivity may be measured with equipment during sample collection.

What should the water well sample be analyzed for?

Chloride and sodium are principal chemical components in oil and gas field brine waters and are typically elevated compared to shallow ground waters in Ohio. Another indicator of oil and gas activities is the presence of dissolved methane gas in water. The additional recommended parameters (e.g. barium, potassium, sulfate, bromide, BTEX) aid in the interpretation of water quality results and help distinguish various types of water quality contamination.

The sample parameter sets listed in the table on the following page are recommended for establishing background water quality and are grouped in order of importance. The more parameters analyzed, the higher the cost of the water analysis. If funds are limited, start with the Tier 1 sample set. However, because there is normally a sample collection and processing fee associated with professional water sampling, it may be more cost effective to sample for all three tiers at once if possible. Note, not all laboratories provide sample collection services nor are equipped to analyze for methane.

Recommendations for Water Well Sampling Before Oil and Gas Drilling

Recommended Water Quality Sampling Parameters
Tier 1 Parameters	Tier 2 Parameters	Tier 3 Parameters
Barium Chloride Magnesium Potassium Sodium Strontium Sulfate Total dissolved solids Specific Conductivity	Tier 1 sample parameters + Calcium Hardness Total Alkalinity pH Iron Manganese Total suspended solids Bromide	Tier 1 and 2 sample parameters + BTEX (benzene, toluene, xylene, ethylbenzene) Methane (dissolved)*

*Include with Tier 1 if laboratory can analyze for methane.

Ideally, two or three samples should be collected in different calendar seasons to allow you to establish the normal variability in ground water quality over time due to rainfall and other factors.

When assessing the overall health of your water well, you may want to consider analyzing for nitrate, arsenic and Escherichia coli (E. coli) bacteria as these are the most common contaminants of concern in ground water. These contaminants are typically not associated with oil and gas production activities.

What do my sample results mean?

Ground water quality can vary over time and the seasons, and is influenced by the type of geologic materials the ground water is moving through, natural replenishment from rainfall and flooding (recharge), and chemicals used or applied on the ground that are transported by recharge moving to the ground water. Subsequently, your water sample is a snapshot in time of the water quality in your well. Ohio EPA and other state agencies have collected background water quality data across the state as part of an ambient ground water quality monitoring program. For data on natural ground water quality, go to www.epa.ohio.gov/ddagw/gwqcp.aspx#LiveTabsContent115418 for data on natural ground water quality.

If the chloride or other parameters are near or higher than a health-based standard or there are detectable levels of methane in your well, you may want to seek the advice of a water quality professional to determine the potential source(s) of the contaminant. The additional Tier 1, 2 and 3 parameters analyzed will be useful for the water quality professional in identifying a potential source of contamination.

Are there health-based standards that apply to private wells?

The Ohio Department of Health (ODH) has established health-based standards for private water systems that are the same as the standards for public water supply systems established by the Ohio EPA and U.S. EPA. For more information, go to www.epa.ohio.gov/portals/28/documents/DWStandardsList.pdf.

Information on health risks associated with each water quality standard can be found at the ODH website at: www.odh.ohio.gov/odhPrograms/eh/water/PWShminfo.aspx and at the U.S. EPA website at: <http://water.epa.gov/drink/contaminants/basicinformation/index.cfm>.

Recommendations for Water Well Sampling Before Oil and Gas Drilling

What type of ground water investigations does ODNR – Division of Oil and Gas Management conduct related to oil and gas drilling?

Since 1983, ODNR – Division of Oil and Gas Resources Management has conducted ground water investigations in Ohio when it receives complaints alleging ground water contamination by oil and gas drilling. ODNR – DOGRM technical staff respond within 24 hours and use advanced equipment that allows for a complete ground water investigation. Since regulations were strengthened in 1985, ground water contamination cases caused by oil and gas operations have dramatically decreased.

Are there regulations to provide for the replacement of my well if it is impacted by oil and gas drilling?

Section 1509.22 (F) of the Ohio Revised Code gives ODNR – Division of Oil and Gas Resources Management the authority to require an owner/operator of an oil and gas well to replace the water supply of the holder of interest in real property whose water supply has been substantially disrupted by contamination, diminution or interruption resulting from the owner's oil and gas operation. This includes supplies of water for domestic, agricultural, industrial or other legitimate use from an underground or surface source.

Where can I get more information about Marcellus and Utica Shale drilling?

- Ohio Department of Natural Resources, Division of Oil and Gas Resources Management website: www.ohiodnr.com/oil/shale/tabid/23174/Default.aspx.
- Ohio Environmental Protection Agency, Shale drilling website: www.epa.ohio.gov/MarcellusandUticaShale.aspx.
